John Jolls Appointed General Manager

Warwick, RI (September 1, 2011) – Today R.I. Analytical Laboratories (RIAL) announced that Mr. John Jolls has joined the Company as the firm's General Manager.

Mr. Jolls' past experience includes 19 years spent with a large environmental, transportation, landscape architecture and civil engineering firm. Jack became involved with key projects involving hazardous waste, wastewater, solid waste and transportation issues. During that time, he held various positions including Associate, Vice President, Senior Vice President and Corporate Board Director. He also was Principal in Charge of a thriving branch office, where he hired and managed a technical staff of 20 persons.

In 2007, Jack began serving as Assistant Professor on the faculty of the Business Administration Department of Eastern Connecticut State University where he taught business management and business writing courses. In 2010, he was awarded the Faculty Environmental Leadership Award for his work in bringing important environmental issues into his classroom discussions.

Jack earned a Bachelor of Science in Chemistry from Worcester Polytechnic Institute, and his Master of Business Administration from Northeastern University.

Paul Perrotti, Vice President of RIAL, stated "with his strong grounding in the environmental consulting industry and extensive experience in client development, corporate marketing, business management, strategic planning, consulting and training, we are confident Jack will bring new perspectives, welcome changes and a sense of heightened excitement to R.I. Analytical."
